WEDNESDAY AVENINO, SEPT. 28.

A HINDU MAGICIAN. - A correspondent at Madras willes: A beautiful young Rajout of twenty, by name Padmasing, who came here a fortuight ago, gave his first performance last Saturday. The place was well crowded. The young man began the performance by playing on the fiddle, the exquisiteness of which I am at a less to describe. It was the grandest performsecol ever heard. There was a small tent ab ut a yard and a haif in height in the centre of the house where the performance was g ven. This was in de up of cur iron bars, joins ed by rattane; the base formed a square, and the top of it was a dome made up of sticks, The teet and a red sailo cover. The construction of this cost, or whatever you may call it, was such that it could be taken to pieces and adjusted in a minute. Then came the "Dusavathanum." this was done by playing ten kinds of musical restruments. We used the tent examined, and found nothing inside. The young man entered it, and took in the instruments that were ou sile. All these instruments were played upon at the same time, accompanied by stoking by the young man alone. Then all the instruments were taken out, he remaining inside the tent. Scarcely a few minutes of ter there was a noise of brass vessels. Immediarely followed the noise of water being poured from one vessel to snother. Shortly after he threw out two cloths, one he wore at the time he entered the tent and another. At last the tent was taken to pieces, when we found the young man dressed like a beautiful damsel, and decorated with flowers and jewels, after the fashion of Hindu denoing girls, and wearing white moslin with lace brusers, and a violet bidice, the contents of which a constable tried so examine. Before he entered the tent he had three tof r; when he came out his head was like a female's. The general belief of the Hindus is that it is all done by the belp of spirits.
